This year's Dalston Children's Festival was the biggest yet, with over 30 free events over the two days of 26 May and 2 June

OVER 5,000 young people took part in this year's Dalston Children's Festival. Families were spoilt for choice, with more than 30 free events spread over two days. Highlights included a giant play area in Gillett Square, pizza making and flower pot planting in Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, a Pride in the Park picnic for foster and adoptive lesbian, gay, bi and transgender families, and drum workshops at the Vortex Jazz Club.

Resident Jenny Gould said: "It's been great fun! There's a great atmosphere in Dalston Square." For more, see 6-7.

DARING DESIGNS

THE ninth prestigious Hackney Design Awards have launched, with nominations now open for the best new buildings and public spaces in the borough.

The biennial awards, which began in 2004, celebrate the best of the borough's architecture and design, including new buildings, alterations, extensions, restorations, and public space and landscaping projects in streets and parks.

Nominations are open until 16 July, and anyone can nominate: architects, residents, employees, or people who are inspired by a new building or place.

A variety of different projects are eligible for the awards, including those for residential, commercial, community, educational and industrial use.

Entries will be shortlisted and judged by an independent panel of architects and urban design experts. The awards will be announced later in the year.

To be eligible for an award, buildings or projects must be from Hackney and have been completed and in use in the last two years.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: "The Hackney Design Awards celebrate great architecture in our borough and recognise the contribution that good design makes to our neighbourhoods and our quality of life.

"Anyone can nominate any new building or public space, which can be in any style from contemporary to heritage, small or large. You could recognise new ways of using indoor or outdoor spaces, the use of new forms of building materials or construction techniques. You might want to recognise the role of architecture in reducing energy consumption, or how good design can help tackle climate change."

Holding court

Artist's impression of what the new properties at Marian Court, on Homerton High Street, will look like

ONE HUNDRED and sixty new homes in Homerton are set to be built directly by the Council in the final stage of the regeneration of the Bridge House and Marian Court estate.

More than half of the new properties at Marian Court, on Homerton High Street, will be genuinely affordable Council homes for social rent and shared ownership, paid for by selling some outright in the absence of Government funding to build social housing.

The proposals, approved by the Council's Planning Committee on 6 June, also include a new community centre for residents and affordable workspace for small businesses.

Rather than selling land to a private developer, the Council is building, managing and selling the homes itself – meaning all residents will be Council tenants or leaseholders.

Council officers and architects have spent the past year working closely with existing residents to design the project, which also includes better public spaces, new walking and cycle routes and more trees.

> "I'm proud that Hackney is building thousands of new Council homes for the residents who need them most"

The development is the final phase of the regeneration of the Bridge House and Marian Court estate and will replace 75 ageing properties that are uneconomical to repair and do not meet modern standards.

Existing secure Council tenants are guaranteed the right to return to a new property in the new development with the same tenancy conditions, with leaseholders offered a fair deal for their home and shared equity in a new property.

In total, the wider regeneration project will deliver 275 new homes built directly by the Council. Forty homes, entirely for Council social rent and shared ownership, have already been completed, with another 75 currently under construction.

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "I'm proud that Hackney is building thousands of new Council homes for the residents who need them most, alongside first-class schools and public facilities for their families.

"Here at Marian Court, we're also, for the first time, directly creating new affordable workspace for local businesses.

"Despite ministers not giving us a penny to build social housing, we've already built nearly 350 new Council homes for social rent and shared ownership ourselves, and Marian Court is one of more than 20 sites where we are building."

Existing plans for this stage of the regeneration, approved in 2011, were shelved last year after the Council listened to feedback, reflected on the priorities of the new Mayor, and decided to explore how it could increase the number of Council homes for social rent it could build on the site. The new plans add 16 more new Council homes for social rent.

Construction is expected to begin later this year and be completed by 2022.

Nearly 13,000 families are waiting for a Council home in Hackney, 3,000 of whom are homeless and living in temporary accommodation like hostels and B&Bs. The Council is building nearly 2,000 new homes over the next four years, with more than half for social rent and shared ownership, alongside three new schools and a new leisure centre, subject to planning permission.

The Government provides no funding to the Council to build social housing. As a result, the Council funds new social housing and public facilities by building some homes for outright sale – always marketed to Hackney buyers first.

Ready, steady... eat!

Residents on Farleigh Road, N16, joined in the nationwide Big Lunch with help from comedian Jo Brand and celebrity chef Ainsley Harriott

COMEDIAN Jo Brand and celebrity chef Ainsley Harriott were among those who brought traffic to a standstill on Farleigh Road, N16, as over 100 residents turned the residential street into a free, outdoor restaurant.

The event on 3 June was part of the Eden Project's Big Lunch concept, whereby neighbours get together, share food and build friendships.

Jo Brand said: "There's such a mix of people just having a chat and a bite to eat. Everyone's nattering about what's going on in the neighbourhood and how they can help each other. This is what communities should be like."

Ainsley Harriott added: "It's so reassuring that millions of people are getting together on the same day to show that community spirit is getting stronger across the UK – even better if they are doing it over food!"

Lindsay Evans, a resident on Farleigh Road, concluded: "It's the one day of the year that two sides of the street become one. It's just wonderful."

News in brief

Join in the Festival of Learning

RESIDENTS can sharpen their CV writing skills, pick up social media knowledge, and even learn a new language at this year's National Festival of Learning.

The annual event aims to encourage more adults to take up courses, workshops and classes, such as learning how to start a business and picking up practical skills – like first aid or basic IT.

It also aims to deliver quality training into employment for those with no qualifications or residents who have learning disabilities, autism, and mental health conditions.

The festival will also include taster workshops in everything from learning how to use Photoshop and online safety for parents, to craft-building and yoga.

The festival runs from 11- 22 June, over 10 venues across Hackney. For more information, and to enrol, pick up a brochure from local libraries, or visit: www.learningtrust.co.uk/section/adult-learning

The future of Hackney Today

THE Council's Cabinet is set to meet on 18 June to consider the options available and what decision to make about the Government's direction that it stop publishing Hackney Today fortnightly.

Sajid Javid, former Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, wrote to the Council in April directing it to adhere to the Code of Recommended Practice on Local Authority Publicity, which recommends council newspapers should be published no more than four times a year. A quiet revolution

LONDON Fields Primary School, E8, has become the fifth school in Hackney to trial a scheme that bans traffic from nearby roads during school opening and closing times.

The School Streets scheme, which began at St John the Baptist School last year, launched at London Fields on 6 June.

It aims to improve air quality and road safety outside schools, and make it easier for children to walk and cycle more.

At London Fields, only buses, cyclists and pedestrians will be able to access Westgate Street, between Sheep Lane and Broadway Market, at 8.30-9.15am and 3.15-4pm.

The road closure is enforced by cameras, with drivers liable for a fixed penalty notice if they drive past the school while the road is closed.

There will be a bus gate at the junction of Lansdowne Drive and Trederwen Road, which will only allow local buses, pedestrians and cyclists through at 7-10am and 3-7pm, Monday to Saturday.

> "There are still too many children in Hackney who are driven to school, which is bad for air quality"

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and deputy mayors Feryal Demirci and Anntoinette Bramble launched the scheme.

Cllr Demirci, who holds Cabinet responsibility for transport, said: "I was delighted to launch our fifth School Street, delivering on our commitment to make Hackney streets and, in particular, the streets around schools, quieter, cleaner and more liveable.

"There are still too many children in Hackney who are driven to school, which is bad for air quality and bad for their health, so I'm really grateful to the children, parents, teachers and residents at London Fields who supported the new School Street."

The School Streets trial will run for nine months, after which it will be reviewed and, if successful, implemented permanently.

Breaking the cycle

Mark Barton from the Council, Samir Khattab from St Giles Trust and Dele Woye from the Department for Work and Pensions all work in Hackney's Integrated Gangs Unit

The borough's unit is dedicated to tackling gang-related crime and providing people with the confidence and tools to take back control

THERE is no quick fix in supporting people out of gang crime, according to Jan Stout, who manages Hackney's Integrated Gangs Unit (IGU), set up in 2010 to tackle gang related crime in Hackney.

"Consistent, long-term support for people is crucial, as supporting them out of crime can often take years. We try and balance the need to address people's vulnerabilities, safeguarding issues and their families' need for support with addressing the enforcement side of things," says Jan.

Staff from the Council, the Met Police, the Probation Service, the Department for Work and Pensions and outreach organisations like St Giles Trust and Safer London's Empower team all work together in the IGU.

Samir Khattab and Tijen Tahir from St Giles Trust work directly with people involved in gang activity. The pair focus on challenging people's ways of thinking, supporting them to take back control of their lives.

Tijen says: "We support people through education, employment and emotional support.

"Despite their confidence, the people we support can be intimidated by the simplest of interactions: getting a bank account or visiting a job centre – we help them with that."

Samir adds: "We try to unlock people's potential. It's first about challenging their false aspirations. When it's cool to have a big watch, the money to afford them isn't in normal jobs and you have a peer group that isn't challenging you, that's where we step in."

One of the IGU's key features is having enforcement and justice functions embedded in the team.

The Council's Youth Offending Team has staff working in the IGU.

Their role is to work with young people on court orders: "We work with young people to get them reintegrated back into the community. Sometimes, keeping them on the school roll and in education is the first big step," David McLean from the Youth Offending Team says.

Jan adds: "The Probation Service do a significant amount of work in the IGU with people on our radar who are over the age of 18.

"There are also dedicated staff from the Met who are handpicked to work with gang members, as well as a cutting-edge intelligence unit, which means that we can identify emerging trends in street gangs as well as identify people who are on the cusp of joining gangs.

"This means the other partners involved in the unit can target their support on these people to try and stop them getting involved."

Tijen says having justice and enforcement agencies within the team helps: "We know first when there's an incident in the borough, and we can go directly to the people we support to find out if they're affected and offer help. The police also help us to get people rehoused if they're facing danger in their home."

In the past few months alone, the unit has helped six people into apprenticeships and further education.

For those working in the IGU, is that what success looks like?

Dele Woye, from the Department for Work and Pensions, works within the IGU. He says: "There's a lot to overcome – employers are often reluctant to employ people with convictions and some areas aren't safe for those we work with because of their past, so a direct route into a job isn't always easy.

"A lot of the time we have to consider training first, before we go down the job route. I've just helped one person start working as a roofer and another as a rail maintenance worker."

Tijen adds: "I support someone whose best friend died in his arms, he was getting involved in things he shouldn't and got caught by the police with a firearm.

"I was his responsible adult in police interviews, we got him and his family the support they needed and now he's studying economics at university. That's what success looks like, but it takes time to gain their trust, to make them believe in themselves as people and make a difference to them and their family."

BOARD GAMES, Bollywood dancing and a bouncy castle were just some of the amazing activities on offer as part of this year's Dalston Children's Festival.

This year was the biggest yet, with over 30 free events on 26 May and 2 June.

More than 5,000 children took part and were spoilt for choice, with free play in Gillett Square and pizza-making and flower pot planting in Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, families could get messy, have fun and enjoy the sunshine.

One of the biggest draws was the Dalston Square kids' takeover, which included a visit from the Hackney Playbus, cycle training with Stars'n'Stripes, music and a peace quilt making session.

Resident Jenny Gould said: "It's been great fun. There's a great atmosphere in the square, and there's good activities for all ages."

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Deputy Mayor, Anntoinette Bramble, joined in the fun and games, and helped children making a piece of music using vegetables as instruments at School of Noise sessions.

Over in Haggerston, last year's Hackney Carnival parade winners Tropical Isles helped kids create feather headdresses. In Stonebridge Gardens, drag queen storyteller Maxi More captivated her young audience with tales of individuality, diversity and tolerance at the Pride in the Park family picnic, which featured a bouncy castle, sports sessions and cheerleading workshop from Badu sports.

The picnic was organised by the Council's fostering service, as part of the Hackney Pride 365 festival, to celebrate lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex (LGBTQI+) families.

Elsewhere, Arcola theatre played host to a clowning workshop and charity the Hackney Pirates had a swashbuckling book swap and storytelling event.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for arts and culture, said: "Hats off to the artists, businesses and community groups who contributed and worked together to put on two Saturdays packed with things to do and crackling with fun. The kids loved it and the grown ups too, with everyone heading home having had a good time."

Hackney

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

hackneypeople

Cllr Clare Potter (above) has been elected Speaker of Hackney, with Cllr Kam Adams as her deputy

Speak straight from the heart

A FORMER carpenter, an enthusiastic table tennis player and a resident for 17 years, Cllr Clare Potter is looking forward to a busy year ahead as the new Speaker of Hackney.

The Brownswood councillor's top priorities during her tenure are mentoring and promoting positive role models to help young people realise their potential in school, at work and in life.

Cllr Potter said: "I am honoured to have been elected as Speaker. Hackney is a special place that welcomes newcomers from different parts of the world. I look forward to meeting with residents from different communities and to work to help strengthen the wonderful community spirit that exists here."

The Speaker's job is to chair full Council meetings, preside over citizenship ceremonies at the Town Hall, attend numerous events throughout the year and welcome visitors to the borough.

It is traditional for the Speaker to pick two charities to support throughout the year.

But like her predecessor, Cllr Soraya Adejare, Cllr Potter has chosen three – all of which are helping young people in Hackney to unlock their potential.

> "I want to do something to improve the lives of young people, particularly those who are hard to reach"

Her three chosen charities are: Shoreditch Trust's Blue Marble Training Project, You Make It and Hackney Quest's Father2Father programme.

The Blue Marble Training Project offers a working kitchen where trainees learn and develop expertise at their own pace while being fully supported.

You Make It is dedicated to empowering young, unemployed women with the skills and experiences needed to help them realise their passions and pursue their goals.

Hackney Quest's Father2Father mentoring programmes aim to support young people from all backgrounds by offering positive role models who will be with them during the transition from childhood to adulthood.

Cllr Potter said: "There is a lot of pressure and attention placed on young people today. From my background in training and working with women and young people I understand how important it is to provide the right kind of support.

"My experiences have developed my commitment to social change. I want to do something to improve the lives of young people, particularly those who are hard to reach.

"I am especially looking forward to hosting groups in the Speaker's Parlour in the Town Hall.

"I am passionate about understanding where people come from, and I think small, intimate gatherings are the best way to do this. I want to bring people together and create a sense of social cohesion."

Another issue the Speaker feels passionately about is promoting Fairtrade and working with schools to create awareness about ethically sourced food and products from a young age.

She is keen to use her time in office to encourage all residents to consider the importance of Fairtrade and to promote Hackney's work on sustainability and energy efficiency.

The Speaker would also like to build closer working relationships with neighbouring boroughs to raise awareness of these issues.

Cllr Kam Adams, who will be supporting Cllr Potter during her time in office as Deputy Speaker, said: "I have lived in Hackney for over 35 years, and I am so pleased that I can give something back to this great borough."

Mission to Mars

Students from the Petchey Academy had 24 hours to devise and accomplish their own mission to Mars

WHAT would you do if you had just 48 hours to escape the planet? That was the question posed to 120 local schoolchildren last month, who joined the Science Museum for their very own Mission to Mars.

In a surprise disruption of their normal lessons, Year 7 and 8 students from Petchey Academy were called to an emergency briefing and told that an asteroid the size of five football pitches was on course to hit the school within the next 48 hours.

With either deflection or destruction of the asteroid impossible, NASA – staff explained – were instructing everyone to escape to Mars. The students therefore had 24 hours to devise and accomplish their very own mission to Mars, in collaboration with pupils from William Patten and Northwold primary schools as well as Laycock Primary School in Islington.

> "I wanted to make STEM real to students, and widen their aspirations"

The children's 'mission' was developed with the backing of the Engineering Education Grant Scheme and the Science Museum, and saw them embark on a series of workshops.

The adventure, on 2 and 3 May, was 'launched' by Sarah March, science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) coordinator at Petchey, with the help of Lola Olaore, one of Google's Top Black Talents, who told the pupils about her own career in STEM.

Sarah said: "I wanted to make STEM real to students, and widen their aspirations. Right from this early age, it is vital to show how important STEM is in their world and how the skills they develop through its application can be beneficial.

"Events like this give a real opportunity for students to shine, doing something fun and interactive, and still focused on learning."

A participating pupil said: "These two days went way too fast."

They may not have left the planet, but their STEM skills have rocketed.

News in brief

Hackney Adult Learning Services rated Good by Ofsted

HACKNEY Adult Learning Services has been praised in an Ofsted report, after being rated 'Good', following its most recent inspection.

In the report, Ofsted inspectors claimed the service for adult learners offered a well rounded education. In particular, the inspectors recognised that leaders and managers have high aspirations for all learners and have put in place effective strategies which have strengthened the quality of teaching, learning and assessment.

The report finds that the Council's Adult Learning Service is good across all five categories and highlights the significant improvements that have been made and the range of teaching methods tutors use to motivate and engage adult learners.

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "I am thrilled that we have been graded good in all categories. The comments the inspectors made reflect the level of commitment and hard work that has gone into ensuring our residents have the best possible support they need to pursue lifelong learning opportunities."

New Director of Education

ANNIE Gammon, Headteacher of Stoke Newington Secondary School, is set to become Hackney Council's new Director of Education.

Annie said: "Hackney has some of the best schools in the country, and I'm looking forward to working with young people, staff and parents to help further build on these strengths. This is a particularly exciting time to take on this role, as the Council and schools continue to work together toward our shared goal of making sure all young people in Hackney have the best possible start in life and can access the opportunities available to them."

Annie, who has led Stoke Newington School for the past 10 years, will take over from interim Director Sian Davies, in September. She was previously a Deputy Head and an Education Adviser in Tower Hamlets.

Cardinal Pole school wins national debating competition

A SCHOOL in Hackney has seen off tough competition from over 240 schools nationwide to be crowned the winners of a national debating competition.

The Cardinal Pole Catholic School debate team travelled to the House of Lords to compete in the Urban Debate League Grand Final on 14 May.

The group of six teenagers: Alec Lau, Taiwo Olaojo, Edward Ntalindwa Badege, Philip Webb, Katie Lowbridge, and Boran Sis competed against 6,000 other students, clinching the national title in a debate against Sydenham School from Lewisham.

The motion for the final debate was 'this house would require elected politicians to have their immediate family use only the local education and NHS services.'

Edward, one of the team members, was very passionate about this topic. He said: "This motion would help fight against economic and social imbalance by having progressive ideas of more inclusion. That way we're all on the same level, and that's when we can start to progress socially and financially."

Wireless Festival

6-8 July, Open Finsbury Park, N4

FANCY a festival, minus the mud? Wireless may be sludge free, but it still big on grime.

In fact, Stormzy, Wiley and Giggs are among this year's headline acts. Still, they may find themselves playing second fiddle to a roster of the hottest rap and RnB acts from across the pond.

The roll call includes Migos, Post Malone, J.Cole, Big Sean, Rae Sremmurd and DJ Khaled – all top selling artists in the states. Around 50,000 people come to this most urban of festivals every year, flocking to Finsbury Park for two days of musical talent. This year's line up has been called 'the biggest, boldest yet' by NME. Day tickets start at £55.

Win tickets to 'King' in concert at Hackney Empire

AFTER its first and only performance 30 years ago, the late Martin Smith's musical, 'King' in concert will be performed as a special concert at the Hackney Empire, in co-production with London Musical Theatre Orchestra, for two evenings only.

Martin Luther King Jr knew he would marry Coretta Scott from their very first meeting. Over the course of their marriage, alongside their brothers and sisters within the movement, they fought for the rights of African American people in a divided United States.

King tells the story of their life together, and the strides, successes and sacrifices of the 1960s Civil Rights Movement that saw them change the course of history.

Appearing in this concert version of King will be a cast of West End stars including Cedric Neal as Martin Luther King Jr, Sharon D Clarke as his mother Alberta King, and Debbie Kurup as Coretta King, his wife.

This year also marks 50 years since the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.

Not only will this be the first time the show has been staged since 1988, this will be the first time any of Smith's original pieces will be performed in full since his death.

King will be performed on 30 June, at 7.30pm, and on 1 July, at 5pm. Tickets are priced from £10-£35.

Bump Buddies

Until 5 Jan 2019, Hackney Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8 1GQ

A NEW display at Hackney Museum tells the stories of motherhood in the borough, exploring the triumphs and the trials that come with being a new parent.

Curated by a group of mums working with the Shoreditch Trust's Bump Buddies programme and Hackney Museum, the V&A supported exhibition tells real life stories of motherhood in Hackney in 2018. The display focuses on the lives of five women. Though the backgrounds of these women may differ, the often invisible challenges and victories of motherhood can be a shared experience.

As well as creating the display itself, the women also added a small play area with picture books and toys in the space, for parents and children to use.

Free postcards, designed by one mum with inspirational quotes, are available for visitors to keep or send to mothers they know. There is also a chance to hear music created by one mum during a time she was experiencing domestic abuse and depression.

Spirit of adventure

Young people took part in an expedition from Runnymede to Abingdon and a 10-day residential trip to The Gambia as part of their DofE award

A GROUP of young people from Hackney are celebrating after being presented with their Gold Duke of Edinburgh (DofE) awards at Buckingham Palace.

The young people took part in the Council's Young Hackney Youth Go Global project, which enabled the group to take part in activities to achieve their Gold DofE award.

Victoria Ayodeji, Jessica Nevin, Victoria Vanderpuije, Emily Pomeroy and Isaac Osofisan, all 19, visited the palace last month to receive their awards.

Isaac said: "It is great for self-development and a fantastic way to challenge yourself, enabling you to take things on you've never done before. It really is a once-in-a-lifetime experience and rewarding in the best way."

The young people completed five sections including public speaking, volunteering, campaigning to raise awareness of global poverty, organising campaigns for Walk for Water and attending local food banks.

The programme included fundraising for a 10-day residential trip to The Gambia. This involved renovating a nursery school, working with young people and spending time in the homes of Gambian families to develop a better understanding of issues affecting local young people in The Gambia.

> "The experience has challenged them to see the world through a new set of lenses"

The teenagers also took part in a four-day expedition, which included paddling upstream on the Thames from Runnymede to Abingdon marina.

Nancy Bending-Beckett, from Young Hackney service, said: "This type of programme helps young people to grow and realise the opportunities that are open to them, which is an important message for any young person growing up and living in Hackney.

"The experience has challenged them to see the world through a new set of lenses and to be confident in expanding their horizons."

Young Hackney is looking for young people between 14 and 19 years old to get involved in the next two-year programme.

News in brief

Help keep young people safe

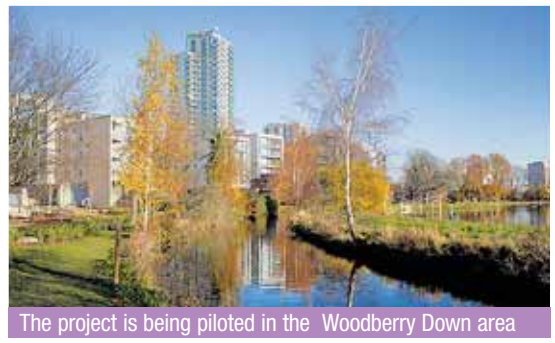

RESIDENTS and businesses in the Woodberry Down area are being urged to get involved in a project aimed at keeping young people safe.

The Council is piloting a programme called 'Contextual Safeguarding' and needs residents, parents, carers and local businesses to come forward and share their thoughts and concerns about things that might put young people at risk.

Whereas traditional social work focuses on family relationships, Contextual Safeguarding, developed by the Council with partners at the University of Bedfordshire, acknowledges that young people can also be at risk from factors outside their family home. These can lead them into situations they don't want to be in, or to cause harm to themselves or others in the community.

For example, it could be poor lighting or hidden walkways which attract anti-social behaviour, specific cases where people force others to cause harm or any situation where a young person may persuaded to do something they don't want to do.

The information gathered will help to develop local strategies to protect young people who may be at risk.

The project is being piloted in the Woodberry Down area

The Deputy Mayor, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, said: "Now, more than ever, communities want to know that their young people are safe. Hackney has a proud reputation for innovation in social work, and we think that Contextual Safeguarding has the potential to shape the future of children's social work, which is one of the most important things we do as a council."

To find out more, visit the Redmond Centre, Kayani Avenue, Woodberry Down, N4 2HF, on Tuesdays from 3.30-7pm; e-mail: contextual.safeguarding@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3635.

Young authors putting pen to audiobook

CHILDREN from Hackney have had their stories recorded and published as an audiobook.

The short stories, by 35 young people aged eight to 12, were written at out-of-school clubs run by the Hoxton based charity, the Ministry of Stories.

Each child then recorded their own story, while editors added music and sound effects.

The finished audiobook CD, called The World was an Avocado, is the result of a partnership between Penguin Random House UK and the charity, which aims to harness children's imaginations and help them to realise their creative potential.

Young author Uresa, 11, said: "I found it really cool when I recorded my story because I got to wear the headphones and speak into a microphone.

"I thought the sound effects would make the story feel more alive and real – and it did come to life."

The CD was published by Penguin Random House UK. To hear some of the stories, for free, visit: apple.co/2M8cUsT

To find out more about the Ministry of Stories, visit: www.ministryofstories.org

The event attracted people from across the capital; 7. Hugh Callaghan from Hackney Wick sang 'Danny Boy'

FORMER EastEnders actor John Partridge joined more than 350 people at the London Aquatics Centre, at the biggest ever 'Singing for the Brain' session to date, which took place during the borough's first Dementia Arts Festival.

The event, organised by the North London Alzheimer's Society during National Dementia Action Week, took place on 24 May at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. As well as a song from the soap star, whose mother had Alzheimer's disease, it featured a star turn from Hackney Wick resident Hugh Callaghan, 88.

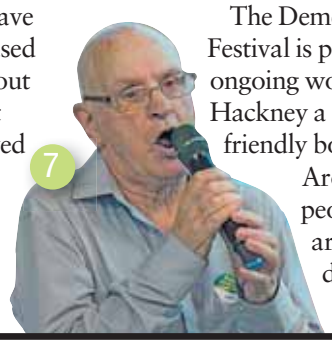

Hugh, who took to the stage to sing 'Danny Boy', was diagnosed with dementia more than four years ago.

He attends weekly sessions at the Copper Box Arena with his carer Adeline Masterson, 85.

She said: "Hugh loves music, it is his life and he thoroughly enjoyed singing in front of such a large crowd."

Sandra Cater, Dementia Friendly Community Coordinator in Hackney, said: "We have been so pleased by the turn out and support we've received during the week.

"All of the events were designed for people with dementia in mind, due to the benefits they offer, and we hope the festival has made people feel that they are included and involved in their community."

The Dementia Arts Festival is part of the ongoing work to make Hackney a dementia friendly borough.

Around 1,300 people in Hackney are living with dementia, and the demand for local dementia-friendly services are set to increase.

On 12 June, the Council is hosting a Dementia Friendly Hackathon as part of London Tech Week. Attendees will help develop ideas for apps to support the lives of those living with dementia.

News in brief

Homerton hospital wins award

HOMERTON University Hospital is one of the highest performing hospitals in the UK, according to annual awards that analyse all hospital trusts in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The CHKS Top Hospitals Awards are based on the data that hospitals submit to the NHS Digital service. It looks at areas including safety, clinical efficacy, patient experience and quality of care.

Niall Dickson, Chief Executive of the NHS Confederation, said: "These awards have become hugely respected not least because they are based on objective data."

This year, for the first time, the awards were able to analyse data from every single trust. They found that Homerton hospital was among the top five hospital trusts in the UK. Homerton's Director of Workforce and Organisation Transformation, Daniel Waldron, said: "This recognition by CHKS reflects the hard work of our staff to ensure better outcomes for all our patients."

Help shape local health system

HEALTH and care organisations in Hackney and the City want to hear views from people to help shape the future of the local health and care system.

A focus group led by Healthwatch Hackney will ask residents about what is important for their health and care, what works well now and what changes they would like to see in the next few years. The feedback will be used to show what residents value and measure progress towards achieving this.

The group discussion will take place on 14 June, from 5.30-8pm, at Hackney CVS, 24-30 Dalston Lane, E8 3AZ.

To book a place, call: 020 7923 8358; or visit: www.future-hackney-city-health.eventbrite.co.uk

Let's talk about joined-up services across health and care

RESIDENTS can have their say on plans for health and care in Hackney while hearing more about local services at an event later this month.

In partnership with the Council, The City of London and a host of other partners, the City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) Let's Talk event on 26 June will give attendees an opportunity to drop in and share their thoughts and opinions with commissioners and service providers.

Visitors will also be able to find out more about joined-up services across health and care, known as integrated commissioning.

Using this approach, staff from the CCG, councils, health care and social care workers and pharmacists can share knowledge, lessen bureaucracy and reduce duplication of work while tailoring services around patients and residents.

As part of commissioning in a joined-up way, attendees will learn about plans for health and social care services to work across eight neighbourhood areas.

Other services featured at Let's Talk include Hackney's Stop Smoking Service, Sugar Smart, support to get active, as well as healthy eating information.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, Transport and Parks, said: "We've designed Let's Talk to ensure that leaders from health and care will be available to listen and act upon the views and experiences of residents."

Let's Talk is set to take place from 4.30-8pm at Amnesty International Human Rights Centre, 17–25 New Inn Yard, Shoreditch, EC2A 3EA.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge.
Chicken and chips are tasty and cheap to buy, but are also high in trans fats and sodium, both of which can increase your risk of developing heart disease, strokes and other cardiovascular problems. This meal is often low in nutrients.
With young people from Hackney Ark, Shoreditch Trust made a healthier version of chicken and chips (and coleslaw), which cost less than £1.50 per person. The chicken is still crispy and full of flavour, but lower in fat than fried chicken. The sweet potato chips are delicious and full of fibre and Vitamin C. The coleslaw is light and fresh and contains a range of vitamins and minerals as well as added fibre.

Chicken, chips and coleslaw

Serves 8 as a main dish

Preparation time 15 mins

Cooking time 40 mins

Ingredients

For the chicken
- 8 pieces of chicken (thighs, drumsticks or small breast)
- 300g polenta (cornmeal) or breadcrumbs
- 4 tsp garlic powder
- 4 tsp paprika
- 1 tsp black pepper
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 1 tsp olive oil (for brushing the baking tray)

For the chips
- 4 sweet potatoes
- 1 tsp paprika
- ½ tsp cayenne pepper (optional)
- ½ tsp black pepper
- 1 tbsp olive oil

For the coleslaw
- ½ red cabbage, finely sliced
- 1 carrot, grated
- 1 red onion, finely sliced
- 1 small fennel bulb or 1 apple, finely sliced
- 1 tbsp raisins or cranberries
- Freshly ground black pepper

Dressing
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 50ml/2fl oz red wine vinegar or lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon of wholegrain mustard
- Fresh mint, chopped to serve.

Method

- Preheat the oven to 200C/Gas 6. Cut the sweet potatoes into wedges and toss together with the oil and spices in a bowl. Lay the wedges out on a baking tray and bake in the oven for 40 minutes
- Next, combine the breadcrumbs or polenta with the garlic powder, black pepper and paprika in a large bowl. Beat the eggs in another bowl. Dip the pieces of chicken into the egg mix and roll in the breadcrumbs/polenta to coat
- Rub the olive oil on a baking tray and arrange the chicken pieces on it. Bake for 20 minutes in the oven (at 200C) until golden and cooked through
- While the chicken and chips are in the oven, make the coleslaw. Grate and finely slice the vegetables. Combine in a bowl with the raisins or cranberries. Make the dressing by whisking together the olive oil, mustard and vinegar or lemon juice. Sprinkle with fresh mint to serve
- When the chicken and chips are cooked, serve with the coleslaw – and enjoy.

Have your say on the future of SEND provision in Hackney

RESIDENTS, parents and professionals with an interest in special educational needs are invited to a roundtable discussion about funding.

Cllr Chris Kennedy, who recently took on the special educational needs and disability (SEND) brief, will host the event, which is aimed at finding out about residents' experiences of SEND provision and their ideas for what services might look like in the future, in the face of ongoing Government funding freezes for these services.

Those taking part will be asked to discuss key issues in small groups. Their feedback will help to shape Council policies around SEND and will also inform the work of a new SEND working group

The group will be led by an independent Chair, with representatives from parents' groups, campaign groups, councillors, teachers and other professionals.

It is hoped that this group will develop recommendations about the way services are provided and funded in mainstream schools, to ensure the Council can continue to adequately fund high quality services for young people.

The recommendations will be consulted on towards the end of the year.

The SEND event will be held in a central Hackney location on 26 June, from 6.30-8pm. To take part in this event, find out more, or register your interest to attend, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk/hackney-learning-trust/codesign

Let's dance!

Hackney's hot steppers have been captured bopping by Gibson's studio

A KEY theme running through the Gibson images is Hackney's residents celebrating – whether a wedding, a birthday or a workplace party – and as part of that comes the dancing.

On this page are images of dancers taken on a variety of occasions including the beautifully poised ballerinas in the studio, young men and women learning to dance at Barrie's Dance school, on Mare Street, and party-goers celebrating weddings and engagements. Everyone featured in these images are currently unknown to Hackney Archives.

On 5 July the Hackney Archives team is set to celebrate the Gibson collection at an event held at Hackney Museum from 6-7.30pm. For more information, visit: www.facebook.com/HackneyArchives

Residents can see more photographs on display at the Hackney Museum exhibition and online at: flickr.com/photos/hackney_archives/albums

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall.
To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.

The London Borough of Hackney ("The Council") in exercise of its powers under section 56 of the Housing Act 2004 ("the Act") has on the 10th of May 2018 designated the entire area of its district, as subject to Additional Licensing. The designation applies to all Houses in Multiple Occupation ("HMOs'') that are occupied under a tenancy or a licence unless it is an HMO that is subject to mandatory licensing under section 55(2)(a) of the Act or is subject to any statutory exemption and with the exception that, in respect of a converted block of flats to which Section 257 of the Housing Act 2004 applies, the Additional Licensing scheme will only apply where all the units of accommodation in the block are privately rented.

This scheme will be known as The London Borough of Hackney Designation of an Area for Additional Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation 2018.
